Effects of Climate Change on Natural Resource Management and Planning in California

EDAW, 2022 J Street, Sacramento, CA 95811

Climate change is expected to pose major challenges for the management of natural resources in California. Modeled changes in species ranges and habitat conditions need to be addressed in species and habitat management planning. This series of brown bag seminars contributes to the urgently needed discussion between scientists and natural resource managers and planners. We invite you to bring your lunch to any or all of these sessions and join in the discussion! See RSVP information on the back side.
